

What really matters, Have you found joy in your life? Have your life brought joy to others?

We ask ourselves at least once in our lives why are we here and what really matters. There are rivers of written words on this subject so I'd hate to add more stuff on it. But I found this explanation in an unusual place and it stuck with me. I'd like to share it as it warmed my heart and gave me a direction in the jungle of life.

In the movie "The Bucket List" Morgan Freeman's middle class character asks Jack Nicholson's rich character two questions. He says that "The ancient Egyptians had a beautiful belief about death, when their soul got to the entry to heaven the God asked them two questions. Their answers to the questions determined if they were admitted or not. The questions were:

- Have you found Joy in your life?
- Have your life brought joy to others?
